MINI BEE and Dimpy Butterfly lived in a jungle together. Dimpy was pretty but very proud of herself. She had beautiful, pinkish red wings. She flew around the whole jungle showing them off.

Mini Bee's wings were not so beautiful. She did not appear as attractive as Dimpy. Dimpy always

Mini and Birthday Gift

by Priti Kumari

teased her and quarrelled with her over petty things.

Mini could not help. She would get disappointed and wonder why she did not have pretty wings.

The birthday of Dabbu Tiger was coming close. He was the king of the jungle. He announced that anyone who gave him the best gift, will be rewarded.

Wasting no time, all animals started looking for gifts.

Mini thought, 'I am so small. What can I gift the king?'

Then she got an idea, "I collect nector from flowers and make honey that is eaten and liked by all. If I give that to the king, it will be a nice birthday gift."

On the other hand, Dimpy got an idea too. "Why don't I gift my beautiful wings to the king. He will be happy and I will get lots of prizes."

She quickly went to Chinki Mouse and said to her, "Take out my wings with your sharp teeth."

Chinki tried telling her not to get her wings pulled out. Without her wings she will not be able to do any thing.

Nobody will be able to recognise her and she will be unable to fly.

But Dimpy did not listen to her. She was just thinking of the prize that she would get. She said to Chinki, "Please pull my wings out."

Chinki did as said. Then she thought, 'Dimpy is not recognisable now. All her beauty has vanished.'

Now Dimpy was looking very ugly as her pinkish red wings were no more.

Chinky said, "Dimpy, you are looking ugly without your wings."

But Dimpy did not pay attention. She thought that she would get back her wings in a few days and she will get a prize from the king.

She was highly delighted at the very thought. She went to her friends to give them this good news. But all her friends laughed on seeing her.

Tiktik Mouse, Anty Ant, Kitty Bat were all giving her a strange look. Nobody recognised her. Dimpy said, "Why are you all laughing? I am Dimpy, your friend. Look, here are my wings. I will give them to the king."

Nobody believed her. Everyone said, "Our friend Dimpy is very beautiful. You look very ugly. You do not have those beautiful wings as well. How can you be that same friend of ours?"

Dimpy was annoyed. She said, "Good enough. I will sort you all out. When the king will see my wings, he will reward me well. Then I will show you all."

The king's birthday arrived. All reached his palace and started gifting him. Dimpy Butterfly and Mini Bee also came. But nobody recognised Dimpy there.

When she gifted her wings to the king, he said, "What do I do of these wings? They are meant for flying.

"They look best when they are seen on colourful flowers. They are of no use to me."

Dimpy's pride was hurt badly listening to this. She lost her beauty for greed. She could not even get a prize. She cried and cried.

On the other hand, Mini had collected a lot of nector from flowers which had now become honey.

She gave the honey to the king. The king tasted it and found it very delicious.

He said to Mini, "I did not have such a thing before. This sweet is only with you. You collect nector from flowers and then make honey. No one else can do this work. You work very hard, so you must get the prize."

Mini was in high spirits. She got lots of prizes. ●

Four-coloured Shirt

MINI AND Tini were 2 mice. Both lived at Fatty Cat's place with their parents. As night descended, both Mini and Tini went into Fatty's kitchen and feasted on whatever they found. They not only made mischief but also displaced things of the kitchen here and there.

Fatty was highly troubled. But naughty mice could not be caught.

When Fatty ran behind them, they showed a face and vanished.

One day, Fatty got a trap and placed it in the kitchen at night.

Mini and Tini got trapped. Both were shedding tears on each other's shoulders helplessly.

Suddenly, Fatty's son Kutkut came running. Mummy was standing there.

Kutkut asked, "Where have these new guests come from?"

"Son, they are not guests but rogues. Both have created lot of trouble. Now they will know," and mummy left.

Kutkut found both the mice very cute. He sat near the trap.

" My cute little guests, why do you trouble mummy?" Kutkut shook the trap.

"Kutkut brother, we promise we will not trouble you anymore. Please free us from the trap," the mice pleaded.

Kutkut broke into laughter on seeing them holding their ears, "Ok, from today, you are my friends. I will free you but promise that you will not trouble mummy."

Both Tini and Mini nodded their heads in agreement.

Kutkut looked left and right and opened the door of the trap slowly. Mini and Tini escaped as fast as possible.

When mummy came there after some time, the mice were not seen.

"Where are both of them?" mummy asked, looking around. Standing at a corner, Kutkut was smiling.

Mummy turned Kutkut's ears, "So, you also have joined their gang. You have helped them flee. Now you will be punished."

"Mummy, please spare me. Both are my friends. They have promised me that they would never do mischief again."

Mummy went away.

It was Kutkut's birthday next day. The table was laid with many tasty snacks. Lots of friends of Kutkut came. They ate a feast and went away. Lots of snacks were leftover.

The smell of these snacks reached Mini and Tini at night. But they restrained from creating mischief.

Fatty was highly disturbed in the morning. What has happened to Mini and Tini? They did not come to have such tasty snacks. Everything is at its place.

On the other hand Mini and Tini were making some other plans.

"Kutkut has saved our lives and made us friends. We did not even present her a birthday gift," with her hands on her head, Mini said.

Tini smiled, "Don't you worry. I prepared a gift for her at night."

"At night? But what?" Mini was surprised.

"This 4-coloured shirt," Tini showed the shirt in her hand, "I have made this by cutting 4 old shirts of papa."

"Wow! This 4-coloured shirt is really looking good. Now go, quick. Kutkut might go to school."

As both peeped out of the burrow, Kutkut was seen drinking milk in the kitchen.

Both came quickly and started biting Kutkut's feet. Kutkut looked down in scare.

"My cute friends, why did you not come to my birthday?" Kutkut took them up with love and made them sit on the table. He kept a big box of cake in front of them.

Taking his hands behind, Tini said, “We do not want the cake.”

“Ok, but why did you take your hand away?” Kutkut pulled his hand in front.

Seeing a box in his hand, he asked, “What is there in it?”

“A 4-coloured shirt for you,” said Tini.

“4-coloured shirt?” Kutkut quickly opened the box.

“Wow! How beautiful!” Kutkut ran to mummy shouting.

“Mummy look, this 4-coloured shirt. My cute friends have given.”

Mini and Tini too were very happy seeing Kutkut pleased.

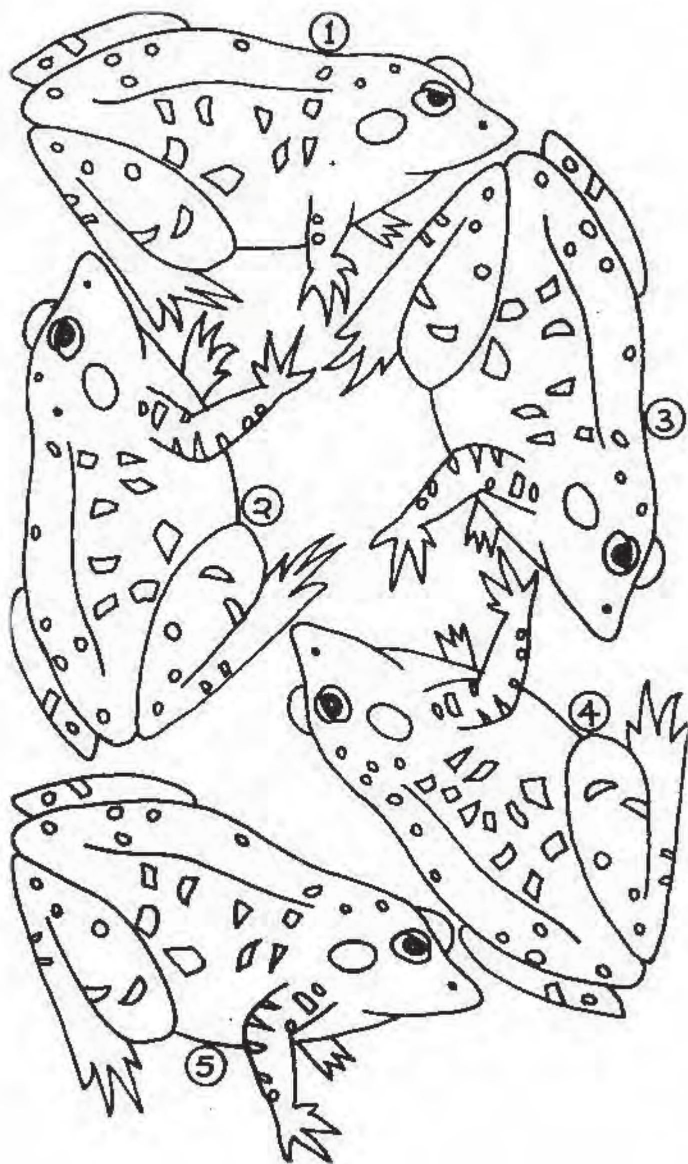

Both took the big box of cake in their hands and dragged it into their burrow. ●

DEEPALIVAN. It was Sunday evening. There was a road jam. Biku and Bablu Monkey bought some things from the market. They took a shortcut and went home. On the way, they met Didi and Vidi jackals.

"Get ready, someone is coming," Didi whispered.

Didi and Vidi put on their masks. Biku and Bablu came close.

"Halt. Hand over all your things or I will kill you," Didi said.

Vidi snatched away their bags.

Biku and Bablu started trembling and looked to someone for help. But no one was there nearby. The whole place was lonely.

Fighting

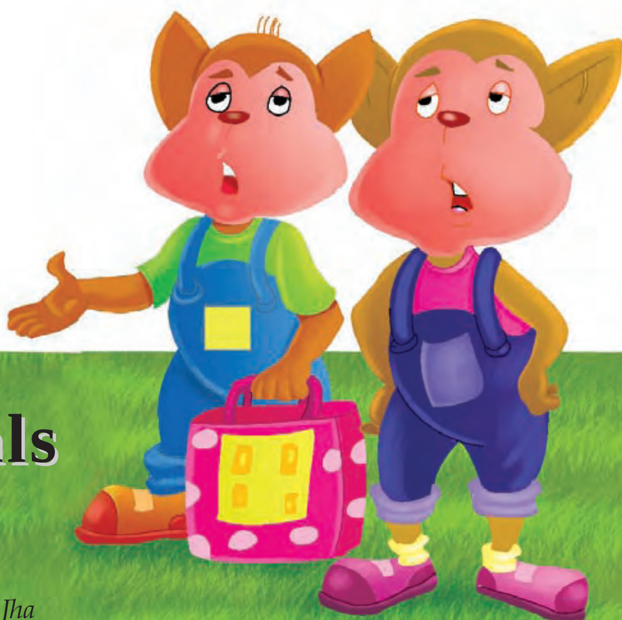

"Take the bag and spare us. We will be thankful," Biku said.

Both threw the bags and fled. Biku followed Bablu. Such incidents started happening in the jungle everyday. All including Songi and Mongi rabbits were worried.

The 2 rabbits made a plan. They went to the market and bought gifts for the criminals— boxing gloves with remote.

In the evening, they took the shortcut route and left for home.

"The rogues will be taught a lesson from the gift. We will have fun... ha... ha... ha... ha..." Songi and Mongi were walking away delighted. Both holding a box in hand, swinging it in fun.

Criminals

by Awadhesh Kumar Jha

Suddenly, they heard a voice, "Halt, what is there in your box?"

Mongi stopped laughing suddenly and said, "It has a beautiful gift, brother. If you want, you can take it or leave it."

As they got a chance, Songi and Mongi threw the box and fled. They hid in the bushes to see what happens next.

Didi and Vidi were very happy seeing gift boxes. They went in the bushes. As they opened the boxes, 2 boxing gloves sprung out with a jerk. They were remote-operated and they boxed terrifically.

Songi then pressed the remote. Gloves started hitting Didi and Vidi non-stop fighting.

Both screamed with pain and said, "Someone come to save us."

When Songi and Mongi heard their screams, they came running. They too boxed Didi and Vidi after switching on the remote.

As they lifted the veil, they saw they were Didi and Vidi.

Songi said, “Promise that you will not play mischief or my gloves will kill you.”

“Please forgive us. Now we will give up bad habits,” Vidi and Didi apologised.

By then many animals of Deepalivan reached there. They understood all on seeing the swollen face of Didi and Vidi. All animals appreciated Songi and Mongi. They found their things back too.

Giving the gloves to Vidi, Songi said, “I gift these gloves and remote to you. Now you must give up bad habits and become good.” ●

On Komodo Island

by Dr M. A. Khan

AS MOREO gained consciousness, he found himself in an unknown place. He looked around. There was nothing except sea and thick forest all around till the eyes could see. The sky was absolutely clear.

Moreo gradually remembered the past days.

He lived on the shores of the sea. His father used to rent out boats to fishermen and tourists. One evening, a group of tourists came to him. They wanted a boat to go to the sea.

Advising them not to go deep inside, his father gave them a strong boat and sent Moreo with them to guide.

They must have just reached a little into the sea when thunder clouds hovered over in the sky. Strong breeze started blowing. Big tides rose in the sea.

The boat started going up and down violently with the tide. It was difficult for the boat to balance.

Suddenly, it overturned with a big wave. Moreo could manage to grab a wooden stool. He caught it tightly. Then how long did he remain floating in the waves, he did not know.

Moreo's head was paining badly and was feeling hungry too. He leaned against a tree. His eyes drooped with fatigue and pain.

Sudddenly, he heard a noise on the tree like 2 animals fighting. Two lizards—3-4 feet each—fell in front of him.

He shivered with fright. He jumped away from there.

Seeing him in panic, the lizards also were scared and tried climbing the tree as fast as they could.

Moreo realised, "They are the little ones," 'Then all of a sudden, a large lizard advanced towards the tree. Moreo got frightened seeing this 3-4 metre long big animal. He ran towards the sea. He thought,' Maybe, she is the mother of these children.

But his guess was wrong. He had come to eat them. But the children were quick. They climbed the tree fast. The animal got annoyed and taking out his spiked tongue started wagging it. His tongue was drooling and flies were all over him.

His eyes fell on Moreo. He pounced upon him. Moreo ran screaming.

The animal followed. Moreo kept running till he fell down, tired.

He was trembling with fear. He did not know what to do. He suddenly saw a sand hill which had many deep burrows. Moreo climbed up carefully. Then with all his strength, he shouted, "Is anybody there? Is anyone listening to me?"

Some movement occurred in the burrows with his noise.

The next moment dreadful eyes could be seen peeping out of the burrows. Before he could run down the hill, these lizard-like animals pounced on him.

Moreo ran towards the shores very fast. He could by then hear somebody's steps close to him. A man was running towards him. When the man came near, Moreo was surprised seeing him. He was one of the tourists who had come to take boat from him.

Moreo told him his experience. He replied, "We have been trapped with these animals. They are called Komodo Dragons. They are very clever and carnivorous lizards. Let us go towards the shores where we can save ourselves. The sand on the shore is hot and they are not used to heat."

Both left for the shore.

"By now people would have known about us missing," Moreo said, "They must have started the search. We should try to pull their attention towards us."

"But how is this possible?" the man said.

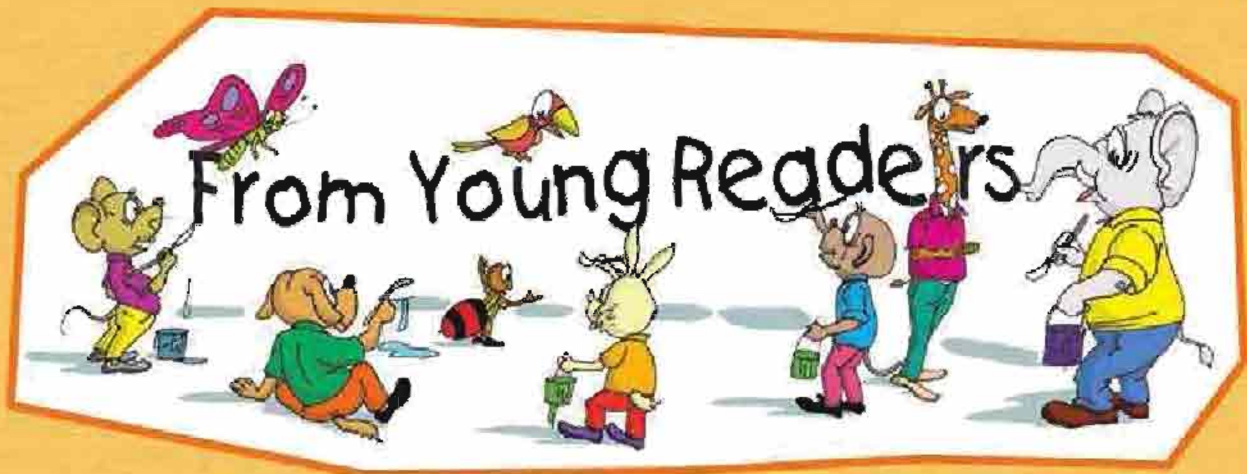

Suddenly, Moreo's eyes fell on the spectacles hanging in the man's neck. He quickly collected dry wood and then with the help of the spectacles lens lit fire to them.

Slowly, the smoke started spreading in the skies.

The whole day passed and nobody came. Moreo was disappointed.

Just before evening the skies again thundered with dark clouds. As Moreo looked up, he was happy. Two army helicopters were circling the skies.

In a short time, Moreo bid goodbye to Komodo island and returned home. ●

Tit for Tat

A POOR woodcutter lived in a village. He worked hard and cut the wood the whole day and after collecting the wood, he sold it in the evening market to earn his daily bread.

Once he carried 3 bundles of the wood on his donkey and arrived in the market for selling. One rich but cunning moneylender came to him and asked for the price of the wood.

The woodcutter was a simple fellow. He failed to sense the smartness of the moneylender. He innocently said, "For the whole wood, the cost would be 100 rupees."

The moneylender gave him Rs. 100 and struck the deal for the wood. The woodcutter accompanied the moneylender to his home for delivering the wood. After delivering the wood, the woodcutter began to return home with his donkey. But he was stopped by the moneylender, who said, "Where are you taking my donkey? The deal was struck for the entire wood along with the donkey. Now you cannot take away the donkey."

The woodcutter was forced to leave without his donkey. He understood the smartness played by the moneylender and he thought of a trick to teach a lesson to the moneylender.

After few days, the woodcutter once again arrived in the market for selling his wood.

Incidentally, the same moneylender came to him to buy his wood. He asked the price for the wood. The woodcutter said, "The wood will cost you 2 fists full of rupees."

The moneylender was delighted to buy the wood at almost throwaway price. The woodcutter delivered the wood at his customer's doorstep and asked for the payment. The moneylender was already holding both his fists full of one rupee coins to be paid to the woodcutter. He moved his fists to give him the money.

The woodcutter picked up his axe and said, "Extend your fists properly, I have to cut them as well with the money."

The moneylender was frightened and he asked, "What? You will cut my both fists? But why?"

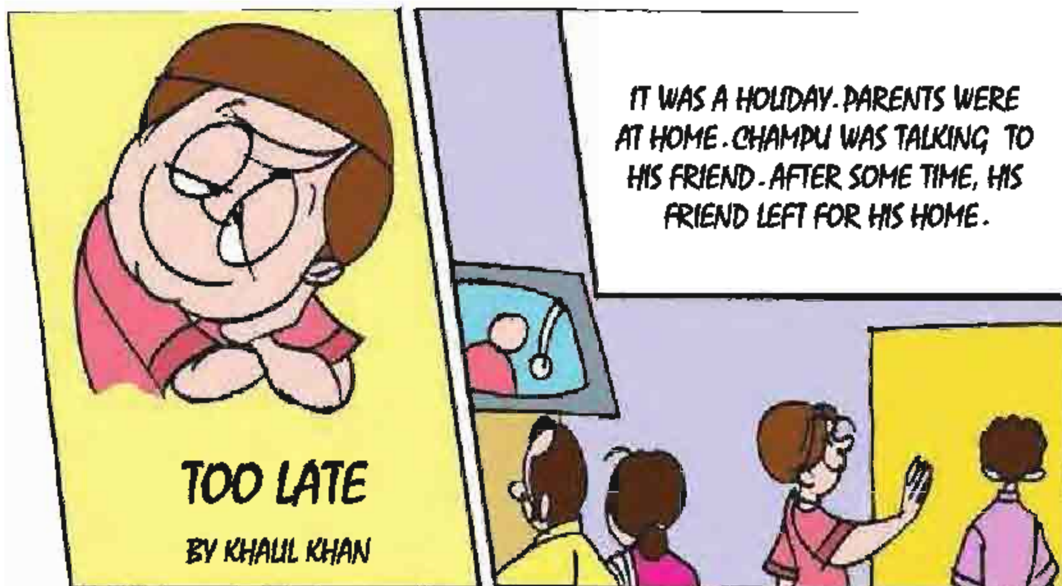

"Yes, the deal was for 2 fists full of money," repeated the woodcutter twice.

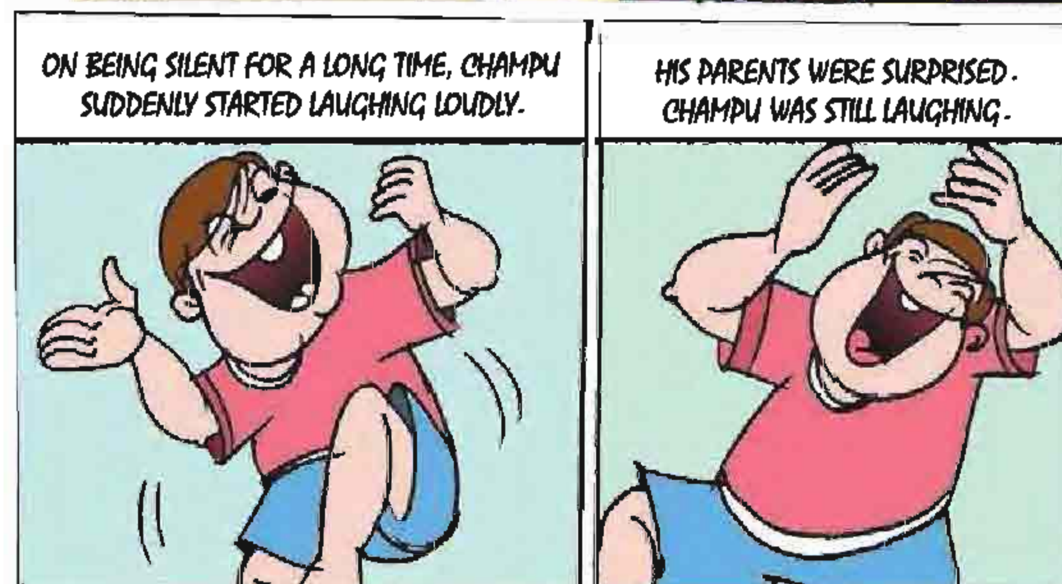

The moneylender started crying and shouting. The matter reached to the police station. The woodcutter narrated the whole story to the Police Inspector and he heard the moneylender as well. The Police Inspector also supported the woodcutter's contention.

The moneylender apologised to the woodcutter. The woodcutter said, "Now in lieu of 2 fists full of money, you have to compensate me with 50 gold coins and my donkey as well."

The moneylender immediately gave him the gold coins and the donkey and decided never to cheat anybody. It was a befitting example of tit for tat lesson.

HIDING IN the bushes Jhaptu Wolf said to his friends, "Two ... three ... four ... five, lovely fat and round kids of goats, soft soft rabbits, pink and red piglings are passing from in front of our eyes and we are starving here."

Thaggu Leopard was annoyed, "Cheeku Rabbit has made life difficult for us. If I find him alone somewhere, I will eat him up."

"You cheat leopard, shed your anger and use your brain. Because of you we are starving. If you had not fought with Bablu Tiger and Cheeku Rabbit, we would not have been ousted from Champakvan," said Jacky Jackal.

"You all must stop arguing and think of finding something to eat," Jhaptu asserted.

"Let me earn some food by mimicking," Jacky suggested.

On the other hand, Vinni Lamb was walking fast after having separated from his friends.

"Wait Vinni, I am coming too," Jacky mimicked. Vinni stopped.

With great speed all the 3 nabbed him and finished him.

Similarly, the 3 made someone or the other their prey everyday. There was panic in Champakvan.

"What am I hearing, Gabru? Who is this second one born who has created such a scare among animals. Bring him soon in front of me or you will be punished," Babban Lion ordered Gabru Rhino.

Crime and Punishment

by Rajendra Kumar

Bholu Donkey was going home alone.

'My artificial leg keeps falling. It is going to be dark and home is far away,' Bholu thought. "Bholu..." Jacky mimicked the donkey's braying. Bholu stopped. 'Good, I have found a friend. Two are better than one. Now the journey will be easier,' Bholu thought and was happy.

"Bholu, you will be our prey today," Thaggu laughed. "We have tired eating lambs, rabbits, pigs.

Today, we will change our taste," Jhaptu said greedily.

"At least, try to find out Bholu's last wish," Jacky smiled.

Bholu started laughing on seeing them. The 3 were surprised.

"Why are you laughing?" Jacky asked.

Bholu thought for a while. 'My plan seems to be working. Now I will try provoking them and work on my plan.'

"You fools, what will you do of my bones? I don't have any flesh or blood on me," Bholu said fearlessly.

They got angry and Thaggu pierced his teeth in Bholu's artificial leg.

Shrieking with pain Thaggu shouted, "Uee, my teeth have broken."

Both kept wondering, 'Jhaptu also did the same and met the same fate. Bholu was having a good time. Jacky was upset.'

"Come, you too fill your stomach," Bholu teased Jacky inviting him to eat him. The artificial leg was injured but he was still walking fast.

Cheeku and Gabru were talking to each other, "I think, some runaway animal is taking revenge on us."

"You are right, Cheeku. Thaggu, Jhaptu and Jacky have created havoc in the jungle," he said to Bholu.

On seeing a limping Bholu they asked, "Who has rendered you like this?" Bholu told them all the story. Then all the 3 made a plan.

Jhaptu groaned with pain, "My jaw is paining terribly."

Thaggu said, “How can this be possible that a living animal does not have blood and flesh.”

“Why can't it be, you fools. Your brains have rusted eating without efforts for so long,” and Bholu threw his artificial leg on Jhaptu. All the 3 were shocked and shouted, “You have again come!”

Suddenly, they heard a loud roar. All the 3 ran but could not run as Babban Lion, Gabru, Cheeku and other animals had surrounded them.

“We made a mistake by leaving you alive earlier,” Gabru said angrily.

“Hand over these rogues to us.

“We will take revenge from them,” the injured animals spoke together.

“Friends, be cool and think. If we also become violent like them, there will be panic everywhere. They did as they thought.

So we must change our thinking and live lovingly and happily. If you treat your enemy with love, it is natural that he will change too,” Cheeku explained.

After he finished, all the animals left. This made Thaggu, Jhaptu and Jacky cry. They said, “Friends, we had thought that we would rule the jungle by creating terror. But by forgiving us you have changed our thinking.

“We are ashamed of ourselves. Punish us as you want to,” the 3 were standing with folded hands.

Cheeku said, “Friends, punish them.”

Bholu spoke up, “Bholu, pick up my artificial leg and give me. I cannot balance any longer standing on 3 legs.”

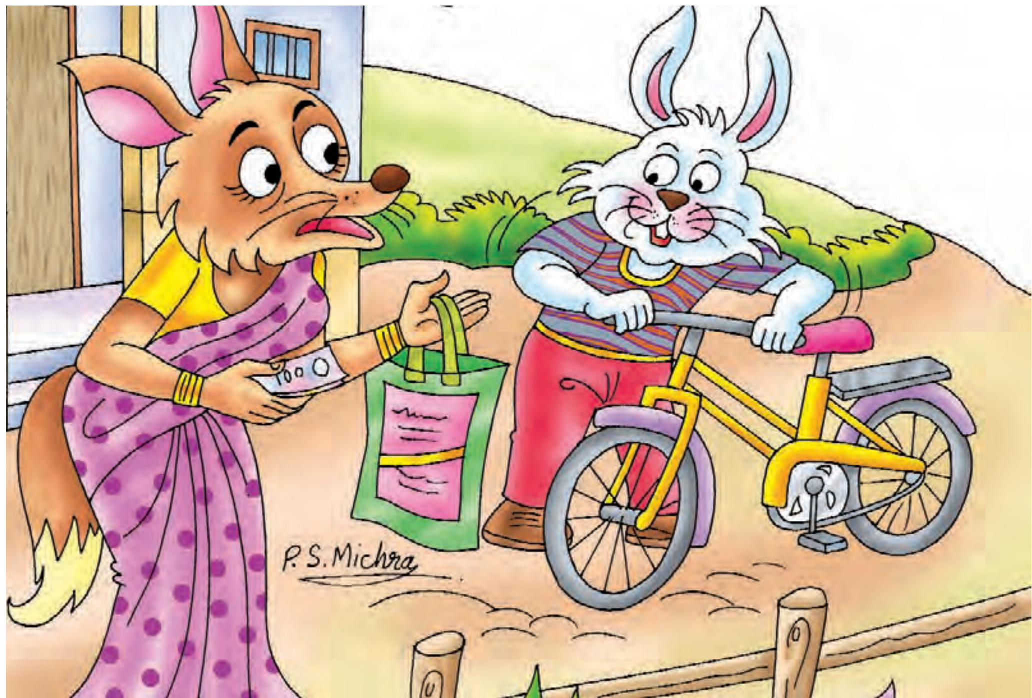

Everyone burst out laughing. ●

The Joy of Giving

by Pramila Gupta

CHINTU RABBIT lived with his mother Pinky in Champakvan. Pinky earned her living by sewing and knitting clothes. This way, she also took care of Chintu's studies.

Chintu was also a dedicated child and always stood first in class. Pinky was happy. But she had a worry. Chintu helped neighbours for free and would never refuse anyone.

One day, when neighbour Nimmi Vixen saw Chintu going on cycle, she called him out, “Will you do my work, son?”

“Yes aunty. Tell me what is the work?”

“I am finished with flour at home. Can you get me 5 kg from the flour mill?”

“Why not? Give me money and a bag. I will get it just now,” Chintu said.

On the way, he met Blacky Jackal. He too stopped Chintu, “Where are you going, Chintu?”

“I am going to take flour from the mill for Nimmi Aunty,” Chintu replied.

“That is good. The letter box is on the way. Post my letter in it. I am not keeping well.”

“Don't worry, uncle. I will do that,” taking the letter from uncle, Chintu proceeded.

He first put the letter in the letter box and then went to the mill. The mill was overcrowded. It was taking time but he bought the flour and gave it to Nimmi Aunty. Aunty blessed him, “I wish you happiness, son.”

It was evening by the time he reached home. Pinky was upset and walking up and down waiting for Chintu. When she saw him, she said, “Where were you? I am waiting since so long. I was worried.”

“You worry uselessly, mother. Nimmi Aunty had called for some flour. I had gone to pick that up. The mill was crowded and so it got late. Give me meals. I am hungry,” parking his cycle, Chintu said.

“Why do you work for free for everyone, son? Don't you see that I work hard day and night for your studies. I want you to be educated and do some good job. But you do not find time from helping your neighbours," Pinky was annoyed.

Chintu quickly took mother in arms, "I study with all my heart and soul and come first in class. You know mother, my teacher says, "You help yourself by helping others."

"What nonsense! Has anyone ever come and inquired what we need?" Pinky said.

"It is not good to help others in the hope that he should help us in return. I like doing all this. Nimmi Aunty is old and all alone. If I don't help her who else will? All in Champakvan are ours, mother. Why do you get upset if I help someone," Chintu explained.

"Your talks are beyond my understanding. You don't know the world is very greedy. After getting their work done it, turns its face," murmuring to herself, Pinky went to bring food for Chintu.

Chintu was a carefree soul. It was summer time. Viral fever was spreading in all homes. Chintu too was in its grip. He was down with high fever.

One day, when the fever came in control, Pinky said, "I did not know Chintu that animals of Champakvan loved you so much. Not seeing you out one day they all were concerned. Blacky Jackal went running and brought the doctor."

Chintu answered in a faint voice, "Really!"

"Yes son, your Nimmi Aunty comes everyday with lots of oranges for you. She insists on giving you fruit juice so that you recover fast. Come on, drink this juice," handing him a glass of juice, Pinky said.

"Chintu Monkey has given many story books and flowers. He was saying, "Chintu is very fond of reading. Give him these books to read when he gets well. He will feel better."

Chintu saw that they were his favourite story books and comics. He was too happy to get them and immediately started reading them.

Pinky insisted, "You are weak just now, son. Reading will strain your eyes. Get well and then read.

Look, the whole room is filled with books."

Chintu saw his room filled with gifts which carried love of Champakvan animals.

Running her hands with love on Chintu's head, Pinky said, "You were right. I was a fool to advise you wrong."

"Don't worry mother. You think like this because you have seen a lot of trouble in life," Chintu said lovingly. ●

Look at everything you can.
Look at the frog,

Look at the goliath betle,
He seems very nice.

His skin seems to glitter.

BEAUTY SQUIRREL got expensive gifts on her birthday. She was unpacking them one by one to see what they had. She was excited to see lovely toys.

"Mummy, what is this round thing in this packet? Sweety Cuckoo's mother has given it. It is heavy too. What must be there in it?" Beauty was eager to know.

"Open it and see what does it contain? It is from Komal's daughter, must be a good one," Beauty's mother said.

Beauty unfolded the packet. But her face hung seeing the gift. She grumbled, "What a gift is this? Does anyone give a piggy bank to anyone as a birthday gift? She has insulted me? I

by Raj Kumar Dhar

will teach her a lesson by giving her an empty bowl to beg as a birthday gift."

"You are thinking wrong, child. Sweety Komal has given you just the right gift. You required one," father explained to Beauty lovingly.

"Papa is right, Beauty. You are spendthrift. By gifting you a piggy bank she had advised you rightly to save money. This gift is better to any other gift that you have received. Learn to respect it and be thankful to Sweety," mummy told Beauty.

There was a letter in the packet. Father picked it up and said, "Take, read this letter of Sweety."

Beauty was feeling better now. She read Sweety's letter.

"My dear friend, Happy Birthday. I am not well and so I am not able to attend your birthday party. I am sending the gift through mummy. Please accept it. Don't get annoyed seeing the piggy bank. Friend Beauty, even I was stubborn and spendthrift like you earlier. Last birthday I had made parents spend recklessly on my birthday without keeping in mind their budget. Because of my stubbornness they could not pay the electricity bill and our electricity connection was cut. We stayed in darkness for so many nights. Since then I have given up the habit of reckless spending and stubbornness. I hope you will give up the habit of spending uselessly and learn to save money."

On reading the letter Beauty realised her mistake. She said, "Sorry mummy, sorry papa. Sweety's letter has opened my eyes. Surely, this gift of hers is invaluable. It was not wise on my part to make you spend 10 thousand rupees on my birthday party. This will shake our home budget. Forgive me, papa."

"I forgive you, child. Your happiness is our happiness. The shaken budget will get back to normal soon. You do not worry," papa said, "I am happier because my daughter has shunned her stubbornness and learnt the value of saving."

Beauty became happy. She immediately put a one rupee note in the piggy bank and thanked Sweety on the mobile.

Since then their friendship became stronger. ●

The Royal Treatment

by Kumud Kumar

KING OF Champakvan fell ill. He stopped eating food and sleeplessness troubled him at night.

He stopped smiling too. He was not even interested in talking to anyone. He stopped going to the court as well. He kept lying on his bed alone in his royal room.

This upset his courtiers a lot. Even the animals of the jungle were worried. Everyone wondered as to what happened to the king.

The royal doctors worked hard to treat the king but he did not respond to any treatment.

Then the chief minister consulted other courtiers. The general advice was that the famous old doctor Meeku Rabbit, who was living in the foothills of the rocky mountains, be called in for the king's treatment.

A royal elephant was decorated to welcome Meeku Doctor. Then the army commander Jeetu Leopard was sent with his soldiers to the foothills.

Meeku was brought with great royal welcome to the king.

The doctor rabbit lived in a rocky hut at the bottom of the hills.

He had grown different kinds of herbs from which he made medicines and treated animals of Champakvan.

The Army Commander Jeetu Leopard told him about the king's ailment.

Meeku quickly agreed to come and see him. The soldiers made him sit on a decorated royal elephant.

The royal procession reached the palace where he was welcomed by the Chief Minister Chatur Jackal at the palace. He was then taken into the royal room.

He saw the king lying on the bed and looking dejected. Meeku tried talking to him but there was no reaction.

Meeku then started examining him in his own way.

He consulted the Chief Minister about the king's health.

At last, Meeku said, "There is only one treatment for the king. We must give him a sudden shock which must either frighten him terribly or make him burst out in laughter or cry profusely. That is the only way the king's mind can start working."

Chief Minister Chatur Jackal started thinking hard on Meeku's suggested treatment. He was searching for someone who has the guts to give shock to the king.

Dikky Donkey suddenly came to his mind. Everyone knew about Dikky's foolish actions. Keeping this in mind, a plan was made for treating the king.

They called Dikky to the court and explained him the plan.

First, Dikky refused doing the work but when the Chief Minister insisted and told him the reason, Dikky agreed.

According to the plan, they took King Sher Singh to the royal lake. He was then made to sit in a decorated boat. Dikky was made to sit with him.

As the boat advanced, Dikky pushed the king in the lake.

The king was terribly frightened while falling in the lake. In order to save his life, he started moving his legs and hands violently. Then on the instructions of Chief Minister Jackal, the king was pulled out of the lake. The minister had already alerted divers for this time.

The king was then brought to the palace. He was kept under the supervision of Meeku. He started showing signs of improving after the incident. He started talking to everyone and showed interest in attending the court.

The king suddenly remembered that Dikky had pushed him in the lake. He got very angry on Dikky. He immediately called the jackal in his room.

As the Chief Minister came in, the king shouted, "What kind of Chief Minister are you? You have no care for me. How dare Dikky push me in water in front of everyone and you did not do anything?

Where is the scoundrel Dikky? Call him just now. I will punish him."

Chief Minister now was assured that the king was all right now and that is why he could remember everything.

Then Chief Minister and Meeku explained everything to the king and also why did Dikky push him in the lake.

Sher Singh cooled down and was also happy with the jackal's intelligence. He then said to the jackal, "Look minister, Dikky has played a great role in my treatment. I will also like to reward him my way."

He planned the way to reward Dikky along with the minister.

According to the plan, the king called Dikky to the court. Frightened Dikky was sure of getting badly punished by the king.

On seeing him, the king roared, "Dikky has so much guts to push me in the lake? He should be punished by chopping off his head in front of everyone."

"As you say, Your Majesty," the army commander said.

Then Dikky's hands were tied behind his back. He was told to place his head on a wooden plank which Dikky silently did.

A frightened Dikky closed his eyes. He was now waiting for the death knell to ring. He knew that as the bell rang, his head will be severed from his body with the sharp edge of a sword.

As the bell rang, he felt as though his head was severed from his body. But lo! What fell on his neck was not a sword but some soft good-smelling thing.

Dikky opened his eyes slowly, 'Oh, there are flowers on me.'

Then he opened his other eye. He turned back to look at his neck which was in its place. Even the knot tied to his hands was loosened.

As Dikky stood straight, he was showered with flowers and to his surprise, King Sher Singh was standing with a garland of flowers in front of him. Sher Singh garlanded him. Everyone clapped for Dikky.

But Dikky did not understand anything.

Chief Minister Jackal explained him why he was being cheered.

Dikky was very happy. He was then bid a goodbye by the minister with respect. In addition to the 'punishment' from the hands of the king, he also got great honour. ●

The Recession

by Vivek Chakravorty

SUNDERVAN WAS in the grip of recession. The king tried many ways to deal with the condition but nothing worked.

In order to reduce expenditure, King Sher Singh sold off his car and started on foot to inspect the forest.

One day when he stepped out of his palace for inspection, the poet of the jungle Tarachand Parrot looked at him and said, "With recession hitting, the king had to sell of his car."

Hearing the parrot's poem, the birds and animals present there started laughing while hiding their faces.

The king got annoyed and roared with anger, "You foolish parrot, the entire forest is in the grip of recession and there is possibility of drought and you are reciting a poem."

"It is your duty to solve these problems as you rule the forest," Tarachand again sang.

"Surely, I am the king of the forest but do the birds and animals of the jungle not have any duty towards the jungle? Poets pull the attention of all their listeners towards the problems and there solutions in their poems but you just write useless poems," King Sher Singh said.

"You have made me realise my duties. I will try to solve the problems somehow." He again recited and flew away.

For next 2 days Tarachand could not be seen by anyone. The third day, Tarachand went to King Sher Singh and said, "Your Majesty, I have thought of plans to emerge both out of recession and drought. I would request you to call all the animals and birds of the jungle here. In front of them I will describe the solution to these problems."

"All right."

Very soon, all the birds and animals of the jungle gathered there.

"Friends, kindly listen carefully and think seriously about what I am saying. Do not think that I am speaking ill about anyone or making fun."

As Tarachand stopped speaking, all animals started whispering to one another.

"As you all know that we are facing recession these days and there are possibilities of drought in our jungle too. Therefore, our prime responsibility is to use food very carefully so that during drought conditions we have adequate food with us.

"Our friend crow eats half of the things and spill half of them. So, I would suggest that crows should eat in 2 batches. The food that is spilled by first batch can be had by the second batch," said Tarachand.

All the crows got wild at Tarachand's suggestion. They shouted, "You want us to have others' leftover as food?"

"No, I suggest that let your children have first and then the elder crows can have the rest. I suppose you will not have problem in having the leftover of your children," Tarachand explained.

The crows nodded in affirmation hesitantly.

"Bulbul, maina, sparrow and we parrots have fresh fruits from the tree. None of us has full fruit. We just have a bit of the fruit and the rest decays on the tree itself. So I suggest that a fruit should be eaten by one family at one time. This will increase brotherhood and the fruit also will not be destroyed."

"The idea is wonderful," everyone praised Tarachand's suggestion.

"Per day diet of big animals like elephants, bears should be decided. This will reduce our importing food from other jungles," Tarachand said.

Small birds and animals welcomed the suggestion but bigger animals like bears and elephants opposed it.

Finally, King Sher Singh had to interrupt, "There are possibilities of drought in our jungle. Therefore, we must reduce our intake of all eatables. If in the interest of the jungle, you cannot do this, you can leave the jungle and go."

Hearing the stern warning of King Sher Singh elephants and bears stopped opposing.

When everyone was quiet, Tarachand again spoke, "Animals like jackal and the fox who are busy stealing others things, should be given the work of digging wells so that they get employment and their habit of stealing goes away. This will also be good in a way that our jungle will have adequate wells with enough water before drought. It will be your duty to keep watch on them, Your Majesty."

"Good, but you tell me Tarachand, you have given duties to all birds and animals but what work are you doing?" King asked smilingly.

"Your Majesty, with the medium of my poems I will send the message of brotherhood and saving to animals and birds.

"It is recession time, adopt the saving method, reduce expenditure and share food," he recited.

All clapped when Tarachand said. ●

IT WAS King Sher Singh's birthday. An announcement was made in Champakvan that whoever gives the best gift to the king, will in return be rewarded handsomely.

All animals started looking for gifts as per their choice.

The king was not educated enough but was liberal and carefree. If he was happy with someone, he would shower him with abundant wealth.

In the evening the king arranged for a big party at his palace. The tables were filled with delicious snacks.

Everyone had lots and lots of snacks and then collected to present their gifts to the king.

"Come one by one and present your gift to me," Sher Singh said.

Chunmun Mouse ran up and extended a packet of cheese to Sher Singh.

When the animals laughed, Blacky Bear signalled them to keep quiet.

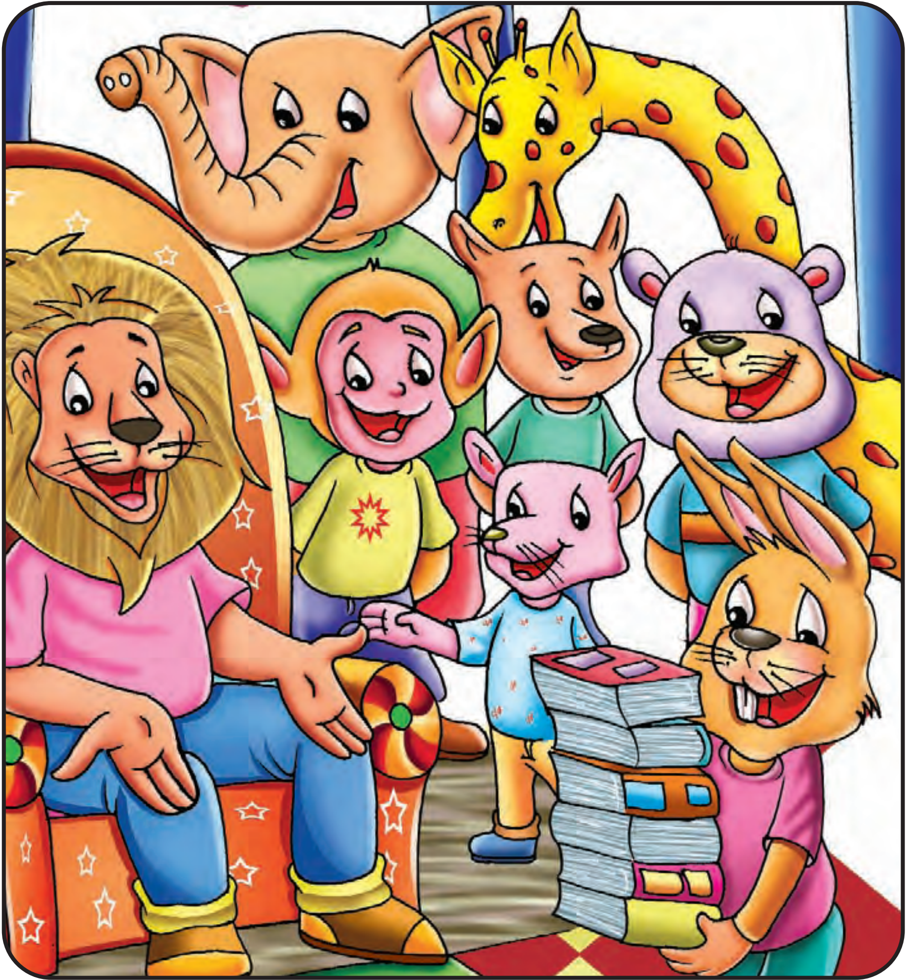

"No one will make fun of the gifts whether big or small or you will be thrown out of the party," Sher Singh said angrily.

Gillo Squirrel came with a basket full of almonds and walnuts. She kept it close to him and went away.

The king happily ate almonds filling them in his fist.

"Your Majesty, I have prepared a suit for you working the whole night," a dozing Gappi Owl came in front and said.

Seeing the suit king quickly opened his clothes to wear what Gappi had given.

It was an honour for Gappi. Tears of happiness rolled from his eyes.

In the same way animals kept coming one by one and gifts piled up in front of the king.

"Is there anyone left?" the king asked at last.

"Yes, Your Majesty," Meeku Rabbit said and ran up to the king with great speed.

He handed over a bundle wrapped in an old paper to the king. King started opening the bundle slowly.

All animals were watching surprisingly as to what was Meeku's gift to the king.

"Books!" everyone was wonder struck as the bundle opened.

"Administration, management, politics and economy... so many books. Good, but I am fifth class fail," the king said.

Handing over another packet to him Meeku replied, "That is why I have got fifth and sixth class books. Your Majesty, "There is no friends better than books.

"You are head of the state and wise and courageous too. It is necessary for you to be more educated than us," Meeku suggested though was scared.

Sher Singh was enlightened on hearing Meeku. He decided that he would start studying further.

He declared Meeku's gift the best and appointed Meeku as the Chief Adviser of Champakvan. ●

Bullet as Gift

by Raj Kumar Dhar

PRINCE, SON of King Sher Singh roared in anger, "You proud rock, I am asking you the last time whether you will get off my way or not?"

"I will not. Why are you wasting time on me? I have told you so many times that I will not give way. Why are you eating my head? What can I do if there is a pit on both sides? Why should I make way for you animals? You may go from whichever side to drink water in the river. Get going from here. Don't spoil my mood. Let me rest," the rock yelled.

"Now you will not be able to rest. I will destroy you. Save yourself if you can. I pleaded you with folded hands that due to summer the ponds and lakes have dried. The river, which has water, is on the other side. If you had given way animals could have had water, but you have not left your arrogance. Now, you will surely be punished," Prince said.

The rock laughed loudly and said, "How can you punish me? What can you do to me? Don't talk big?"

"Well, I will not talk to you at all. Be careful," and Prince took out bullets from the dynamite.

The rock thought that Prince was trying to scare him with a toy. It did not bother.

"These are bullets of dynamite. I will blow you off with them," Prince threatened, showing him the bullet.

"Oh, you will blow me off. Try it," the rock laughed aloud. Then she said, "Threatening me to blow off by showing a toy! You cannot harm me anyways."

Prince could not tolerate this arrogance. He filled the bullet and blasted the rock. The rock was reduced to pieces.

While dying, the rock said, "I thought, you were showing me a toy to scare me. You have really blown me to pieces with the dynamite. I was wrong. You asked just a little space. If I had given that, I would not have been reduced to this state. I have got the result of my doing," and the rock died.

"Long live the Prince," the animals assembled there shouted victory for the Prince. "Now we will be able to drink the river water. This wicked rock had blocked our way. You have done a favour on us by blowing off the rock."

"This was my duty. I did not want to blow the rock off but I requested it many times to give us way but it was too arrogant. I had to take this step."

"You did the right thing. One, who comes in the way of good work, should be taught a lesson."

The old bear asked, "Where did you get these bullets from?"

"They were gifted to me by my soldier uncle

Dahar Singh," Prince replied. "I had to teach the rock a lesson.

Months back while sleeping one night I was murmuring 'bullets, bullets.' In the morning when uncle asked me, I requested him to gift me bullets of dynamite on my birthday. I promised him that I will not misuse the bullets. So he gifted them to me."

Uncle bear smiled and then celebrated for the opening along with other animals.

When Dahar Singh came to know that Prince had utilised the bullets for good work, he praised him. The king too was happy with the good work of his son. He was satisfied that his son understood the problems of his subjects. He would prove a good king in future. But he advised him that he was too young just now. He should stay away from gunpowder and weapons.

Now the animals could drink water from the river. The old and weak ones were more at an advantage as they had to earlier take the way around the rock to reach the river for water. ●

Wonderful Gift of TV Toy

by Sushil Harsh

MEEKU RABBIT had a bad habit of wasteful spending. Whenever he got money from his aunty or any relatives, he used to spend it right on the same day without giving any thought on for what he was spending the money.

His parents were quite worried about his bad habit of wasteful spending.

One day, it was his birthday. Meeku Rabbit was very happy on his birthday. It was day for celebration at his home and in his school. His uncle gave him a beautiful plastic TV toy as his birthday gift. It was a blue-coloured TV with white screen and 3 red buttons. It was an exact replica of a real TV.

Meeku Rabbit asked his uncle, "How does it work?"

His uncle replied, "It has a slot. You have to put coins in it. The day it is full, it will start working."

Actually, it was a piggy bank in the shape of a TV.

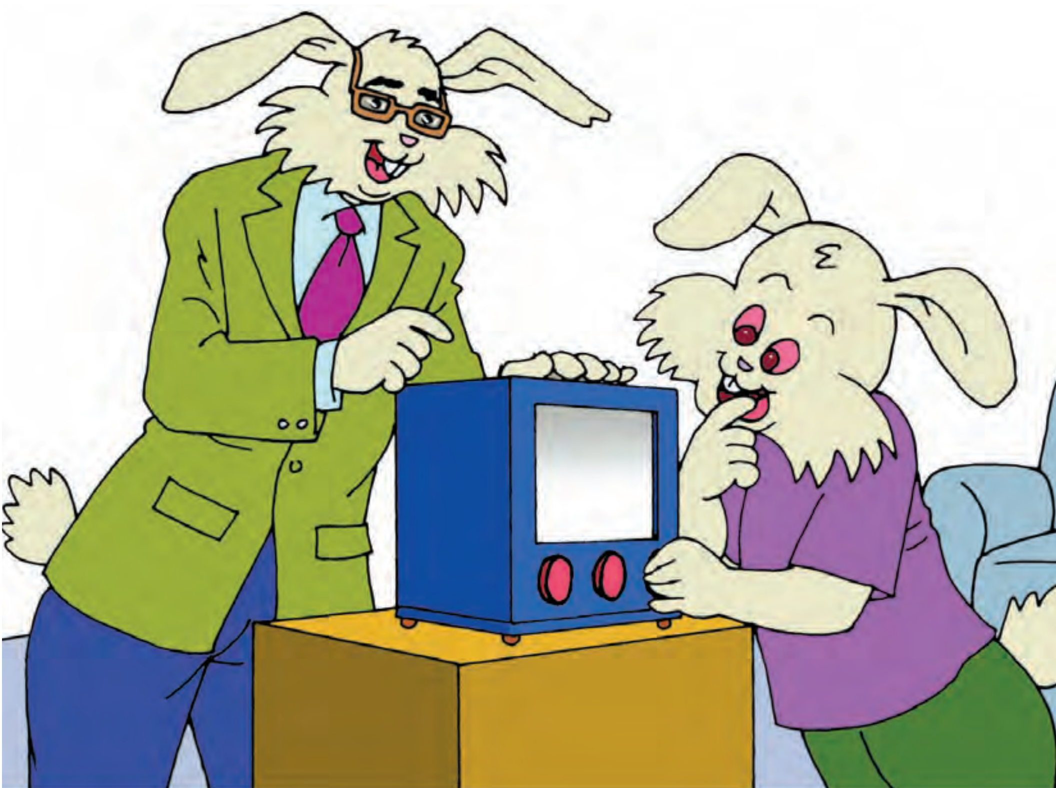

His uncle inaugurated his piggy bank by putting a coin in his piggy bank. The moment the coin was put in the piggy bank, the coin's reflection appeared on the TV screen. His uncle said, “See, the colour has changed. When it is full, your TV will start working.”

Innocent Meeku Rabbit was convinced. He started putting the money in the piggy bank. He daily checked the change in the colour on the screen of his TV toy.

One day, Meeku Rabbit was very excited when he saw his TV toy was almost filled with the coins.

He thought, 'Now I want only couple of few more coins to make it totally full and my TV will start working. I can operate it whenever I want. I will impress all my friends with my TV.'

But suddenly, his TV toy fell off from his hands and its TV screen got a crack.

Meeku Rabbit started crying. He went to his uncle. He was still crying. His uncle made him quiet and repaired the TV screen with quickfix solution.

His uncle said, "Look Meeku, I am afraid now that your TV will not work. But just think because of your TV toy how much money you have saved?"

"Does it mean had I not saved this much of money, I would have spent the money on nothing?" asked Meeku Rabbit.

"Exactly, did you notice, otherwise how much money you would have wasted on nothing? Now I will open a bank account for you in the post office so that you get into habit of regular saving. And you can use your saved money on something which really is useful for you," said his uncle.

Meeku Rabbit asked, "So, what do we do with this TV toy?"

His uncle clarified, "Come on! This is just a toy to make you understand the good habit of saving money. See, there is no machine inside this TV toy."

Meeku Rabbit understood everything and realised that because of an ordinary looking TV toy, he had understood the importance of habit of saving money. ●
